Why Cats Love Interactive and Moving Toys

Cat toys balls

Catnip toys for cats

Cats and dogs are the favorite pets for many people and this is because they also love you back, play with you, show love, do cuddling and licking, even sleep with you. All this brings a sense of joy and accomplishment in you, and most importantly when you live alone and because of your busy routine you have a restricted social circle. Cats are comparatively easy to control, have low maintenance nature, easy to keep as a pet, and can stay in small indoors too. They have quieter temperament, longer lifespan, and can also entertain themselves, which makes them the best pet for anyone.

One of the best ones is the cat toy balls or catnip toys for cats which are considered as the best interactive toys for cats. This toy has a rod (wand) to which a string or ribbon is attached to a lure, sometimes added with fur too. This toy mimics the movements of prey like birds or mice, encouraging cats to chase it, pounce on it, jump and catch it. This will stimulate the cats and promote natural hunting instincts in them, which is otherwise difficult indoors. The owner uses these toys to engage these pets, aids in developing their mental and physical wellbeing, develops an affectionate bond with the owner and helps them stay active and fit.

Catnip Toys

There are other toys available too for the pets in which play balls, chaser toys and catnip toys for cats are included. The catnip toys for cats are various types of cat toys including plush, kickers and flashboards that are filled with or infused with the best type of catnip herbs. It has an active ingredient called nepetalactone, when inhaled or licked by cats boosts euphoric and exciting behavior in them, reduces stress and satisfies their natural instincts like chewing, hunting and scratching.

Cat Toy Balls

Cat toy balls come with a wand or rod that you hold in your hand with attachment variations like ribbon, feathers, rabbit furs or cat toys wands and when you move them in an erratic way, the natural instinct of hunting the prey rises in the cats and they immediately leap or jump on to the toy to grab it. For better play, use some obstacles like furniture cushions or putting underneath the sofa so that the cat can navigate through the environment and get more movement. For this, you can also put some treats in the way while finding toys like cat toy balls that will encourage them plus guide too.

Satisfy Their Natural Instinct of Hunting

The science behind these cat chasing toys and why they're so much popular is due to their natural predatory instincts to catch, grab and jump on the prey. This carnivore mammal is a little version of lions and tigers and so they have similar features. For example, if you throw a cat chaser toy on the floor like a mouse or in air just like a bird will trigger the hunting instinct in the cat. Sometimes when you hide the toy or put it under any obstacle, the cat will start stalking it, slowly trying to target its prey, and once it'll feel the prey is very near then it'll pounce on it. You will see that cat grabbing the toy really hard in its teeth, just like it has won the battle of hunting and finally got its prey. However, start setting small targets for your pet that are achievable and let the cat win so that the cat gets encouraged.

Get Rid of Boredom and Aggression

By engaging your pets like dogs and cats you actually relieve them from a lot of stress and anxiety which might be caused due to several reasons. This helps them to release pent-up energy accumulated in them, in a very fun and light mode. This is the most easy, natural and healthy way of doing that, especially for cats that are a little more furious and anxious. This makes them involved in some playful activity which allows them to feel relaxed and calm.

Ensures Physical Well being

Interactive play boosts activity and exercise, helping many indoor cats to maintain a healthy weight as obesity could lead them to arthritis or diabetes. Some toys like catnip toys for cats with feather mimics like a prey for cats, satisfying their natural hunting instincts, burns their energy through chasing and pouncing, making them super active. Chewing toys or catnip toys boosts dental health of your pets as this helps remove plaque and dirt from the teeth and gums.

Playing with toys engages the cats and avoids boredom to them that leads to aggression and obesity. Some toys are specially designed to boost mind cognitive activities so that it improves its problem-solving skills and by this their mind becomes sharp. This also improves your relationship with the pet.

Conclusion

Shopping cat toys and other essentials for your pet is really very satisfying as many consider them as their family member and love them a lot. Buying toys and then playing with them not only helps cats to feel good but also builds an affectionate bond between you and your furry friend.